STATEMENT OF ROBERT C. BYRD, MINORITY LEADER, UNITED STATES SENATE

As the second session of the 98th Congress draws to a close, I would like to take a moment to review the contributions which Senate Democrats have made to the national debate on the critical issues facing our country and our world.

As the session began, the economy was in its second year of struggle to recover from the steepest economic downturn since the Great Depression of the 1930's. Although unemployment was declining, millions remained jobless. Today, 8.5 million people are still out of work, nearly half a million more than when President Reagan was elected. America's basic industries, long the envy of the world and the living symbol of our industrial might, were reeling from the combined effects of recession and the pressures of ever tougher international competition, rapid and destabilizing technological change, and the breakdown of a stable world currency system.

The Administration's fiscal policies had burdened the country with the largest deficits in our Nation's history, and with a mounting pile of debt that has placed a mortgage on our children's future. The deficits had pushed real interest rates to record levels and keeps them there today. High interest rates have helped to create a dollar that is grossly overvalued, opening U.S. markets to a floodtide of cheap foreign imports and crippling the ability of American goods to compete in international markets. The trade deficit with our trading partners has broken one record after another. It is now expected to virtually double in 1984, which translates into a loss of 3 million American jobs.

When this session convened, our Nation's debt stood at $1.433 trillion. Today, as we prepare to adjourn, the debt stands at $1.573 trillion, an increase of $140 billion in just over nine months. If the government continues to increase its debt at this rate, by the end of this decade we will have a debt over $3 trillion, more than three times what the debt was in 1980. This year, the Administration will spend 37 cents of every dollar collected in individual income taxes just to pay the net interest cost on the debt.

Senate Democrats have done their part to face these issues head on by proposing a host of concrete policy alternatives designed to reduce the deficit, to lead our Nation back to economic preeminence in the world and to assure that in the future, America will remain second to none. In February of 1983, I asked Senator Edward Kennedy to chair a task force of Senate Democrats to look beyond the short run business cycle to focus on the country's long-range economic problems. The task force met regularly over a period of nine months before presenting its report to the full conference of Democratic Senators. The Democratic Conference unanimously endorsed the proposals it contained. A steering group of Democratic Senators under the leadership of Senators Carl Levin, Tom Eagleton and Ted Kennedy oversaw the drafting of legislation embodying the Conference proposal, which was introduced as the Economic Cooperation and Competitiveness Act of 1984, on June 27, 1984. The legislation outlines a comprehensive approach to tackling the job of modernizing America's industries and restoring our competitive edge in the world. Key provisions include a tripartite Council on Economic Cooperation and Competitiveness composed of business, labor, and government representatives; an aggressive trade policy to open new markets and assure fair treatment from our trading partners; adjustment assistance for individuals and communities to help them respond to rapidly changing economic circumstances; and increased emphasis on education, training, and research and development.

Senate Democrats also have offered their own prescriptions for bringing the Federal deficits under control. In February of 1984, President Reagan submitted a budget request to the Congress which contained a deficit next year of $197 billion, reaching $248 billion by 1989. It was a budget that was met with immediate and nearly unanimous, bipartisan rejection. Faced with this crisis of confidence in its fiscal policy, the Administration resorted to a series of closed meetings designed to fashion a more acceptable alternative. However, the Administration insisted that the effort be limited to a "downpayment" on the deficit, ruling out Democratic proposals to double the amount of deficit reduction that the Administration had set as its target. While Democrats initially were invited to participate in these meetings, White House representatives quickly made clear that the Administration was not prepared to meet them halfway. In the end, closed door meetings from which Democrats were excluded produced a new budget proposal which was unveiled with much fanfare and dubbed the "Rose Garden" deficit plan.

That plan, however, would have actually resulted not in lower deficits, but in higher deficits each year. Rather than lend support to such a proposal, Senate Democrats, under the leadership of Senator Lawton Chiles, produced a budget plan of their own, which would have cut the deficit by $200 billion and which, unlike the Administration plan, would have produced declining, rather than increasing, deficits in future years. Further, the Chiles proposal reflected a different set of priorities than the plan supported by the majority, containing fewer cuts in vital programs such as Medicare and a more restrained and affordable rate of increase in the Pentagon budget. The proposal failed on a near party line vote.

In addition to the Chiles proposal, Senate Democrats worked together to modify the Budget Resolution and Deficit Reduction Act to protect Medicare beneficiaries from deep cuts that would have increased their out-of-pocket medical expenses and to assure that Congress would have sufficient flexibility within overall spending limits to shift funds between the Pentagon budget and domestic programs.

While much of the year was devoted to the intense debate over the Administration's fiscal policy and spending priorities, Senate Democrats also were active on a host of other important fronts. They fought to open a seat on the Federal Reserve Board to a governor with experience in small business or agriculture. They worked to extend the Superfund program to clean up the hundreds of toxic waste sites which pose the greatest threat to the health and safety of our citizens.

And Senate Democrats were at the forefront of efforts to overturn the Supreme Court's decision in the Grove City case, which limited the scope and effectiveness of the Title IX program, the landmark legislation which prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in educational institutions, and which has made such a signal contribution to the impressive victories of young American women athletes at the recent Olympic games. The Court decision in Grove City threatens to cripple not only Title IX, but also three other vital statutes which forbid discrimination in American life: the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, which forbids discrimination against handicapped Americans. Legislation to reverse Grove City and return the law to its status quo ante was killed on a party line vote in the final days of this session, despite months of good faith effort to reach a compromise with the opponents of this critically important legislation.

The major, comprehensive anti-crime measure which passed the Senate on October 4, 1984, contains almost all the elements of the Democratic crime package which Senate Democrats first offered during the 97th Congress. It provides for stiffer criminal sentences, pre-trial detention of dangerous criminal defendants, and a whole host of other tough anti-crime measures. Our initiative on crime has had a long and arduous path. The first time our crime proposals were enacted by the Congress, the bill which contained them was vetoed by the President, primarily because he did not want to create the cabinet-level "drug czar" which we thought was necessary to run a truly effective and coordinated effort to attack the massive problem of illegal narcotics traffic. Our proposals were again contained in the Continuing Resolution for FY 1985 which passed the Senate and finally became law.

The Democratic minority has supported a vigorous national security program and a strong, appropriate defense spending level. At the same time, we have made major efforts to attack waste and abuse of the taxpayer's dollar, and focused on promoting those weapons systems which enhance the use of America's technological edge and America's traditional policy of deterrence. These attempts have had considerable success even in the face of stubborn opposition by the Administration. Lastly, Senate Democrats have been concerned about the readiness of our conventional forces, particularly in the European theatre. In this case, the Administration has thwarted our efforts to increase the level of burden-sharing in the Alliance and has frustrated our attempts to reorient its priorities away from overspending on redundant strategic nuclear systems.

In the conduct of American foreign policy, Democrats have insisted on a coherent and consistent approach worthy of the Nation that leads the free world. Democrats offered legislation to clarify America's role in Lebanon and define objectives in Central America. But the Administration opposed these initiatives, and the Nation was left with tragedy in Lebanon and a dangerous uncertainty in Central America.

Mr. President, in my view, this Congress has failed to address many of the pressing issues before the Nation. When compared to its immediate predecessors, it stacks up poorly.

A statistical analysis of this Congress with the 95th and 96th Congresses bears out the truth of this charge.

From 1981 to 1984, the Senate passed 45 percent fewer major bills than in the previous four years. Twenty-five percent fewer laws were enacted during the last four years than the preceding four. At the same time, the percentage of public laws enacted which were of a routine, nonsubstantive, or administrative nature increased from only 17 percent in 1977 to a whopping 64 percent in 1984.

The statistical analyses of the past four Congresses is included at the end of these remarks.

Let me turn now to a more detailed discussion of Democratic initiatives during the Congress.

INDUSTRIAL STRATEGY

On June 27, 1984, a number of Democrats introduced the Economic Cooperation and Competitiveness Act of 1984. As I indicated earlier, the legislation was the product of a Senate Democratic Conference task force that had spent months in crafting a series of proposals that will help foster long term growth and allow America to move into the future with a highly diversified, internationally competitive industrial base. The legislation was preceded by a Senate Democratic Conference publication—Jobs for the Future—that detailed the competitive challenge facing America and developed a comprehensive policy to meet it.

The American economy is now closely tied to a world economy that has become more volatile and more competitive over the last ten years. American involvement with world markets is not just a question of imported oil or other raw materials. In most years, one in three acres is planted for overseas markets and one in six industrial jobs depends on exports. There was a time when American technology and productivity kept most of the world at bay. No longer. The bulk of American manufacturers face stiff foreign competition for domestic as well as international markets.

The Reagan Administration has done nothing to meet the growing challenge of foreign competition—in fact it has made things worse. Huge budget deficits and high real interest rates have combined to create a dollar that is no longer competitive. At the same time, high real interest rates have slowed recovery overseas and exacerbated the problems of the debt-burdened developing countries. The results can be read in the trade statistics. The Reagan Administration has broken one trade deficit record after another. Last year it was a record $69 billion. Recent forecasts suggest the 1984 trade deficit will roughly double—reaching $130 billion by year end. If that deficit were eliminated by American goods, produced by American workers in American factories, the country would be richer by three million jobs.

Industry specific figures are even more shocking. Imports have made major inroads in one American market after another—shoes, textiles, consumer electronics, autos, steel—even semi-conductors. Despite some recent gains, employment in the steel industry is 200,000 below its 1978 level; employment in the auto industry is 25 percent below the 1978 figure.

The President's refusal to accept the recommendation of the International Trade Commission concerning relief and adjustment for the steel industry is a recent example of continuing Administration indifference and uncertainty. Without an attempt to deal with the trade crisis in a systematic way, the Administration seems content to see U.S. industry lose its world-class status. More important, it seems content to stand on the sidelines while American jobs become our number one export.

The Administration has done nothing to lay the basis for a long run competitiveness policy. They have slashed the education and research budgets—jeopardizing America's ability to excel in the industries of the future. Adjustment programs for workers and communities have either been eliminated or severely cut back. The Administration has essentially abandoned programs designed to get labor, management, and government pulling together to make a more competitive America.

The Economic Cooperation and Competitiveness Act will sharply reverse that course. The Act proposes a Council on Economic Cooperation and Competitiveness to produce informed, coordinated, coherent policy choices and to encourage business/labor/government cooperation. To lay a base for long term competitiveness, the Act proposes a number of investments in the future—in education and research. The Act contains a number of proposals to aid the process of adjustment to rapidly changing technology and heightened foreign competition—training programs for small businesses, a modified unemployment insurance system to open up opportunities for training, and adjustment assistance to firms and communities. The Act spells out an aggressive trade policy that will help open new markets overseas and, at the same time, respond effectively to the unfair trade practices of our partners. Under the Act, there would be a study of capital markets, support for state development finance agencies, and the consideration of a National Development Bank.

The Economic Cooperation and Competitiveness Act is a road map for an American future of long term growth and broad based opportunity. It will help America to meet and beat the foreign competition, create a climate for investments in our future, and ease the painful adjustments to rapid economic change. It will be high on the Democratic agenda for the 99th Congress.

MEDICARE AND SOCIAL SECURITY

In no issue area were Democrats more deeply involved during the past year than in attempting to protect the elderly from deep and damaging cuts in the Medicare program. In his 1985 budget, the President proposed billions of dollars of Medicare cuts that would have made considerably more difficult the plight of the elderly who now cannot afford their medical bills even with Medicare's help. The legislation on which this issue confronted the Senate was the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984. The Finance Committee included in that bill a number of the President's proposals—increasing health care costs for elderly and disabled beneficiaries by an estimated $9.9 billion over the next five years.

Senate Democrats led the effort to reduce these increased costs. On three separate votes Democratic efforts were defeated by the majority. In the first amendment, Senators Kennedy and Cranston sought to eliminate both proposed increases in premiums paid to gain Medicare coverage of doctors' bills and proposed increases in the deductibles that Medicare beneficiaries must pay each year before Medicare will pay remaining bills. The same Senators sought to eliminate a delay in initial eligibility until the month following the month in which a person's 65th birthday falls—which would affect only sick and injured persons. When these two amendments were defeated, Senator Baucus proposed an amendment to eliminate the deductible increase and hold the premium increase to one year. This, too, was defeated.

Democrats also sought early in the year to minimize the continuing tragedy of the long term unemployed by establishing a two-year program of health insurance for the unemployed. The amendment, cosponsored by Senator Riegle, was defeated.

In August, Democrats sought again to help the victims of the recession, when Senator Dixon and others sought to add an additional $60 million to an appropriations bill for use in funding emergency food and shelters for the homeless and destitute. This time, Democrats prevailed and the additional help was made available.

One of the efforts during the past year of which I am proudest is the critical leadership and participation of Senate Democrats in efforts to reform the Social Security Disability Insurance program. The Administration used Congressional directives to review the operations of this program as an excuse to indiscriminately purge the rolls of tens of thousands of disabled beneficiaries. Senator Levin, along with Senators Sasser, Pryor, and Moynihan, and other Democrats, worked ceaselessly and diligently for over two years with several Senators from the other side of the aisle, including Senator Cohen, and members of the House, to accomplish the reforms so desperately needed in this program. Just last month those efforts were successful—and we now can expect the program to be operated more humanely and carefully—for the benefit of the disabled as well as for the benefit of all taxpayers.

ENVIRONMENT AND ENERGY

Senate Democrats can be proud of the record they have established in the 98th Congress in the areas of environmental protection and energy policy. This record includes support for a responsible approach to the development of the Nation's vast oil and gas resources and support for a balanced approach to the development of alternative energy supply technologies.

The extent of the threat to public health from exposure to improperly disposed of toxic wastes is only now becoming clear. The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that there may be as many as 22,000 sites located across the Nation where toxic wastes have been dumped. Of these, as many as 2,200 may be placed on the National Priority List for sites which are of sufficient concern that they are considered a priority for clean up under the Superfund program. Senate Democrats have been at the forefront of efforts to clean up toxic waste dumps.

Senate Democrats also supported an effort to correct abuses of Federal onshore leasing procedures. Democrats support efforts to improve the approach to leasing onshore lands for oil and natural gas development. Senate Democrats voted to consider an amendment to the FY 1985 Continuing Resolution which would have required the Secretary of the Interior to use competitive bidding for the leasing of such lands, rather than rely on a lottery system which is being abused at the expense of the Federal government.

Democrats support a balanced approach to the development of alternative energy supply technologies. Democrats have resisted Administration efforts to drastically reduce, and more narrowly focus, the budget for the Department of Energy's energy research and development programs. Senate Democrats voted to support consideration of an amendment to the FY 1985 Energy and Water Appropriations bill which increased funding for solar-thermal research, and to bring the Department of Energy's solar energy program up to par with its recommended FY 1984 funding levels.

Finally, I am proud that the Senate adopted my Clean Coal Technology bill as an amendment to the Continuing Resolution. It provides $750 million for clean coal technology demonstration activities.

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD APPOINTMENTS

Credit is the lifeline of most American businesses. That is particularly true of farmers and small businesspeople. Local banks are the first source of credit for most farmers and small businesspeople. Yet, local credit conditions are heavily influenced by the national monetary policy established by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. Because credit is so vital to farming and small business, it is important that the special needs of farming and small business be taken into account when policy is set. Too often, that is not the case. To make sure that the voices of the farmer and small business person are heard, Senator Pryor proposed a sense of the Senate resolution expressing the view that the next appointee to the Federal Reserve Board be someone with either a farming or a small business background. Despite stiff opposition, Senate Democrats succeeded in attaching the Pryor amendment to the Export Administration Act.

Nonetheless, the President nominated Dr. Martha Seger, an academic with banking and regulatory experience, to the next seat on the Federal Reserve Board. What she clearly did not have was any special familiarity with either agriculture or small business. Again, the Senate Democrats took the lead in stressing the importance of making sure that the needs of farmers and small business people were taken into account when monetary policy was being made. Senators Baucus and Pryor proposed an amendment to the Second Supplemental Appropriations bill expressing the sense of the Congress that the President should withdraw the recess nomination of Dr. Martha Seger and, instead, nominate a person with a small business or agricultural background. Despite overwhelming Democratic support, the Baucus-Pryor amendment was defeated.

RECESS APPOINTMENTS

The recess appointment of Dr. Martha Seger to the Federal Reserve Board also raised the question of the President's use of the recess apppointment power. Dr. Seger's nomination had been sent to the Senate Banking Committee in early June. Four days of hearings were held before her nomination was approved by the Committee on a 10 to 8, straight party line vote. The Democratic members of the Committee had raised serious questions about Dr. Seger's qualifications, and the hearings had not put those questions to rest. There was every indication that her nomination would be subject to considerable debate on the Senate floor.

At that point, the Senate adjourned for the July 4 recess and the Democratic convention. The next Monday, the President avoided the problem of lengthy Senate advice and uncertain consent by giving Dr. Seger a recess appointment to the Federal Reserve. Under the current interpretation of the recess appointment power, Dr. Seger will be able to serve until the end of the first session of the next Congress.

In my own view and the view of most Democrats, the President violated at least the spirit, if not the letter, of the recess appointment power. As a result, forty-one Democrats joined me in introducing a resolution expressing the sense of the Senate that no recess appointment should be made unless there had been a formal termination of a session of the Senate or there was a recess in excess of thirty days.

NUTRITION

The House passed and sent to the Senate several important pieces of nutrition legislation, including reauthorization of the child nutrition programs, authorization of the Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) nutrition program, and legislation responding to the recommendations of the President's own Task Force on Hunger in the child nutrition and food stamp programs. Two of these House bills were placed on the Calendar. Democratic Senators also introduced several pieces of legislation similar to these House bills, but none were reported by the Republican-controlled Senate Agriculture Committee.

Finally, under the leadership of the ranking Democrat on that Committee, Senator Walter Huddleston, a modest child nutrition authorization bill concerning the WIC program and four other nutrition programs was reported and placed on the Senate Calendar. The matter unfortunately was never placed before the Senate for consideration.

EDUCATION

The most critical issue facing American education today is one of excellence. American education is simply not as good as it must be for the future of our country. Our once unchallenged preeminence in industry, science, technology, and commerce is being overtaken by our competitors throughout the world. This crisis in our public schools threatens American prosperity and security.

The Democrats in the Senate have attempted to respond to this challenge. The Economic Cooperation and Competitiveness bill, developed by the Senate Democratic Conference, included a number of specific proposals designed to upgrade the proficiency of our schools in teaching our children the math, science, computer, and foreign language skills they will need if America is to compete successfully in a rapidly changing world economic order. It also included provisions designed to recognize and reward excellence, and to spur students to greater achievement. I am especially pleased that legislation to create a Federal Merit Scholarship program, which I introduced on August 8th, was passed by both the House and the Senate and signed into law.

DEFENSE

Democrats in the Senate have attempted to bring major management reform to the Department of Defense through a series of initiatives. Those initiatives include the creation of an independent Inspector General in DOD, the development of warranty requirements for new weapons systems, the establishment of a bureau of independent weapons testing and evaluation, and the creation of an effective Office of Competition Advocate General in each of the services designed to increase competition in procurement contracting. In each case, the Administration and the Republicans in the Senate attempted to kill or water down the proposal. Fortunately, in all four situations, Democrats prevailed, and to the extent that the shameful level of waste has been revealed and reforms have begun, it has largely been to the credit of Senate Democrats.

Democrats attempted to influence our NATO allies to increase their level of defense spending to the three-percent annual real growth level that they had promised, in order to spread the burden of the common defense. But the Majority Party in the Senate fought this attempt, and watered-down this proposal by Senator Nunn. On June 20, 1984, the proposal was defeated, leaving the American taxpayers to fill the gap left by the shortfall of allied spending levels.

Democrats support a strong strategic defense, including the MX missile in a survivable basing mode. The President, supported by the Republican majority in the Senate, endorsed an indefensible and nonsurvivable basing mode which weakens our strategic defense. The overwhelming majority of Democrats supported a Chiles amendment on June 14, 1984, to refocus our strategic missile efforts toward the more survivable Midgetman missile, but were defeated by the Republican majority.

Given the shocking level of waste in Pentagon programs, Senate Democrats supported a Dixon amendment on June 14, 1984, to recommit the defense authorization bill to Committee to reduce the real growth level from seven to five percent, which was judged to be a responsible level of real growth—at least double the efforts of our NATO allies. The Republican majority in the Senate defeated the proposal, signalling to the Pentagon they they were not prepared to make the Pentagon live within a responsible budget level and to exert greater efforts to remove waste from Pentagon programs.

The majority of Democrats support the reinstitution of the GI bill of education benefits, one of the most successful programs ever created in the Nation. A clear majority of Republican Senators defeated this proposal on June 12, 1984. Instead, the country must be satisfied with a limited "test" program of two years in duration.

Democrats support the most advanced technologies in our defense programs as the cutting edge of deterrence against the Soviet Union. The Pentagon has attempted to reduce the level of funding for the Stealth bomber program in order to shore up support for an expanded B-1 bomber, clearly a second-rate strategic system. My efforts to protect the Stealth bomber against such reductions were successful over a two-year period. Democrats want an effective defense, based on the best in American technology, not a cosmetic program designed more for public relations than for deterrence and defense.

FOREIGN POLICY

There probably has not been an Administration in modern-day history which has had such a dismal record in the area of foreign policy.

The only achievement to which this Administration can point is the successful invasion of the tiny island of Grenada, populated by 110,000 inhabitants and defended by a less than imposing Cuban force and rag-tag elements of the Grenadian security forces. I supported the invasion of Grenada, but this was certainly no big task for a Super Power. However, in assessing the more relevant and important foreign policy concerns which have traditionally preoccupied the energies of our policymakers, the picture is very bleak.

Because the Administration's foreign policy has been at times overreactive, overly militaristic, uncoordinated, and oftentimes incomprehensible, the Senate Minority Party has attempted to compel the Administration to explain its policies to the American people in a coherent fashion.

Lebanon stands out as a particular case in point. In August of 1982, U.S. Marines were sent to Lebanon as part of a multinational force to facilitate the withdrawal of the PLO from Beirut, a mission which most in the Congress believed was attainable and a mission with which most in the Congress agreed, due to its limited scope.

However, following the massacre of Palestinian refugees in the Shatila and Sabra refugee camps on the outskirts of Beirut, the Marines returned to Beirut on September 25, 1982, as part of a multinational peacekeeping force. The American people were led to believe that this would be a temporary presence in order to allow time for the Lebanese Government to exercise control over the greater Beirut area.

In September, 1983, the Administration requested legislation authorizing the continued participation of the U.S. Marines in the multinational peacekeeping force for another 18 months—an open-ended authorization for a President who still had not defined the role and mission of our forces in Lebanon.

Subsequently, the Democrats offered an alternative to the authorization which would have required the President to report to the Congress, under the War Powers Resolution, the circumstances necessitating the introduction of U.S. troops into Lebanon; the constitutional and legislative authority for their introduction; and the estimated scope and duration of the hostilities or their involvement. In addition, the Democrats would have required the President to describe the specific goals of U.S. policy in Lebanon, the specific roles and missions of the U.S. forces in Lebanon, and the specific criteria that were being applied to determine when they had accomplished their roles and missions. If the reports were not forthcoming, then the President would have had to withdraw the Marines within 60 days.

Needless to say, the Democratic alternative was defeated 55-45 on September 29, 1983, by a straight party line vote, thereby denying the American people the information that Senate Democrats were attempting to obtain from the President.

Less than a month later, on October 23, 1983, 241 American servicemen were killed in a terrorist bombing attack on the United States military headquarters at the Beirut Airport. On March 30, 1984, the President announced the U.S. role in the multinational force was being terminated. Warring inter-communal factions in Lebanon, along with Syria, had forced the withdrawal of the U.S. Marines.

In the closing days of this session, the Senate voted 57-42 against an amendment offered by Senator Daniel Inouye to prohibit any further aid going to the contras fighting the Nicaraguan government. Once again, most Democrats supported the amendment. The reasons were obvious. The Administration's original justification for arming and training the contras operating from Honduran soil against Nicaragua was to interdict the alleged arms flow going from Nicaragua to the guerrillas in El Salvador. The original plan called for the training of 1,500 Nicaraguan exiles.

However, the contra army grew to 15,000 guerrillas and the Administration's rationale for supporting this army began shifting like sand. From the original, narrowly-defined purpose of arms interdiction, the objective became one of harassing the Sandinistas in the hopes of convincing them to end their support for the Salvadoran insurgency.

Now, the Administration argues that continued funding for the contras is vital to keep pressure on Nicaragua to open up its internal political processes.

Therefore, most Democrats are raising the question as to what the Administration's real goals are in Nicaragua. And since the answers have not been forthcoming and the rationale continues to shift, the only option left open to most of us on the Democratic side of the aisle is to cut the funding for this operation.

Efforts on the part of Democrats to bring foreign aid spending in line with the Administration's cutback in domestic programs, have also failed. The Senate, largely on a party line vote, defeated 54-46 an amendment offered by Senator David Pryor, to cut $211.5 million from the $917 million in military assistance program monies requested by the Administration. The $917 million figure represented a 600 percent increase in the MAP program from fiscal year 1981.

Twice the minority has attempted to go on record supporting the Administration's concern for international terrorism and twice we have failed. On April 4, 1984, Senator Dodd's amendment to prohibit the use of any funds, directly or indirectly, for planning, directing, executing, or supporting acts of terrorism against Nicaragua, was tabled 47-43, largely along party lines. A similar amendment was defeated 53-45 recently, once again largely along party lines.

Democrats also attempted to have the Senate go on record in opposition to U.S. government support for any individual or group in Central America which is known by our government to have as one of its intentions the violent overthrow of any Central American government with which we have full diplomatic relations. Once again, this amendment to the supplemental appropriations measure for fiscal year 1984 was tabled by a vote of 51-44, largely along party lines.

The Lebanon experience increased Democratic concern that the War Powers Resolution needs strengthening. Since U.S. involvement in Central America has been escalating, Senator Leahy offered an amendment on April 4, 1984, which would have amended the War Powers Resolution as it affected El Salvador. The amendment would have prohibited the introduction of U.S. Armed Forces into or over El Salvador for combat purposes unless the President first obtained a declaration of war or a specific authorization for the use of U.S. combat forces in El Salvador. The amendment was tabled 59-36, largely along party lines.

Senate Democrats remain deeply concerned that our institutional responsibilities and prerogatives under the Constitution continue to be eroded by this Administration. In an effort to begin reversing this trend, Senators Sasser, Inouye, and Bingaman offered an amendment to the FY 1984 Supplemental Appropriations measure that placed a limitation on the use of military facilities in Honduras. Some eight airfields have been ordered constructed in Honduras, all without specific Congressional authorization. These airfields are being paid for with tax dollars taken from the Department of Defense's operations and maintenance account, out of which we are supposed to pay for such readiness items as spare parts, ammunition, and fuel.

The Sasser-Inouye-Bingaman amendment would have limited the use of the so-called temporary facilities in Honduras, financed by the Pentagon, only to training exercises. In addition, the amendment would have prohibited any Pentagon funds from being used to convert a temporary facility into a permanent base unless specifically authorized by the Congress. This was a modest attempt to bring some integrity into the Congressional exercise over the power of the purse. But once again Democratic efforts were thwarted on a party-line vote of 50-44.

Senate Democrats were selective in trying to raise the national debate on matters of vital concern to us all. We were not attempting to haggle over parochial concerns. We were demanding the institutional checks and balances so laboriously constructed by our Founding Fathers to assure that a national consensus would prevail in matters of war and peace.

We Democrats believe that we have a compact with the people of this Nation, and that compact is the Constitution. We Democrats are not prepared to rend the fabric of this compact by turning over to one man, even though he be President, the sole responsibility for making war. The people of the United States, through their votes, invest a trust in us. Democrats believe that this trust manifests itself in the instrumentalities of governance, and we believe that the principal instrument of governance is law—law which is promulgated for the common good. We have attempted to manifest this concern and commitment through the only mechanism we have available to us—the legislative process.
